

Conversation Cards

With the political season in full swing in many parts of the country it may be hard to avoid political discussions at work. One way to keep politics out of lunchtime conversations is with Conversation Cards.

Print, trim out, and stack. Then draw a card to start the next conversation.

How would you spend one million dollars?

Where's your favorite place in the world?

If you could host a talk show, who would be your first guest?

If you could be any animal, which would you be?

What will you do when you retire?

What's the last book you read?

Have you met anyone famous?

What's your favorite movie?

Do you collect anything?

What's the best meal you've ever had?

If you could visit anywhere in the world you've never been, where would you go?

What's your secret talent that no one knows about?
